Fields of interest:

Applied Mathematics: fluid mechanics and heat transfer with application to the boundary-layer theory, heat transfer in Newtonian and non-Newtonian fluids, magnetohydrodynamics and convective flow in fluid-saturated porous media. The detailed modeling of geothermal formations or pollutant dispersion in groundwater flows requires accurate simulations of the flows which are induced or modified by buoyancy. Often such applications may be idealized as external boundary layer flows or cavity flows, but imperfections in the form of non-uniform permeability, layering, etc. are frequently present in real systems. Such imperfections play the role of altering overall flow and convection characteristics such as plan form selection (of interest to mathematicians) and overall rate of heat transfer (of interest to engineers). Analytical and numerical methods which I have used for porous media flows have been applied to clear (Newtonian), non-Newtonian flows and micropolar fluids. During the last five years I have a strong interest in the very new (hot) topic of nanofluids and hybrid nanofluids, where I published more than 360 papers in ISI journals since 2010 until present, an invited chapter and two books. There are more than 1.100 published papers and more than 47.531 citations. I work consistently in order to improve my skills and I have a leaning attitude. Also, I am keenly interested in widening the field of my research work so as to fully exploit my mental capabilities and derive a sense of accomplishment.

Teaching experience:

Theoretical mechanics, fluid mechanics, heat transfer, boundary-layer theory, differential and integral calculus and courses for staff and departmental development: Effective master and Ph.D. supervision, teaching courses and conducting seminars for the students, preparing books for publication, writing proposals for grant funding, writing up own and joint research papers for publication, exploring creative ideas, effective learning and teaching methods in small groups, confidence in presentation skills, review and evaluation papers for publication, developing and managing research groups, supporting students and young researchers.
